The "Toll Of The Road"

When it is said to be called to the ever mounting toll of death and suffering attributable to automobile accidents...

It is well high imperative to pick up a newspaper these days without finding a tragic headline recording one more... fatalistic note...

If the total of killed and injured is outstanding evidence of the fact that some promising life has been snuffed out...

People Staying In Yukon

Winter Population Will Be Much Larger This Year

The Yukon winter population is larger this year, and the winter population of Dawson and the Yukon Interior will be much larger during the coming season of long nights than for some time past.

Hotel and chalet facilities for moving about the country and for sight-seeing are being developed to greater activity in mining and non-mineral industries, financial reasons.

With departure of the summer King from Dawson for Whitehorse, Yukon river navigable has been closed and mail service and a mail stage line will operate.

The Dominion government is completing a large landing field outside the city with a runway of concrete feet long by 400 feet wide, enabling the largest planes to land as well as at any time of the year. Passenger fares either way between Dawson and Whitehorse are offered at $10. The planes make the distance in three hours. The mail stage will carry passengers over the same route for $10, including meals and bed. The passenger service will be continued, and other equipment, will make the trip in three days with night and day travelling.

Buffalo Man Made Long Distance Phone Service Practicable

The man who made the long distance telephone practicable, Edward Grimsinger, 68 years old, 233 Leonard street, Buffalo, died recently at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. G. W. Grimsinger, Pittsburgh.

He was caused by a heart attack.

Mr. Grimsinger, a research engineer, perfected a relay "repeater" which made it possible to maintain sound waves over long distances. He was considered an international authority on telephony and was awarded an honorary degree of master of science by Lehigh University for his work and discoveries in this field.

Save Organization Urges People to Buy All-British "Emulsion"

The job of being a hand-picked percent Briton is becoming a ticklish one for some of the subjects of King George's subjects. It used to entail "buying British" from the emulsion to the grave. Now apparently it means observing the "Buy British" slogan beyond the grave.

Having been asked to buy British food and cheer it with British false teeth, the hundred per cent Briton is now being urged to have himself buried under an all-British tombstone.

The use of "silly foreign tombstones" in British graveyards has just been hotly attacked in a manifesto of the world council of the Council for the Care of Churches.

It is claimed there that the competition of imported tombstones has resulted in the virtual disappearance of the traditional tombstone art of this country.

"The time has come," says the manifesto, "for people to fasten and to determine to support the tombstone industry of their own country."

To boost British tombstones a special organization has just been formed under the name of "Sculpture for the Cause of the Cause."

Its idea is to banish foreign grave stones once and for all from this country. One of the leaders of the organization, a well-known architect, stated that he would "buy" 5,000 new tombstones to be imported into Great Britain weekly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OCTOBER 28

THE CHRISTIAN STANDARD OF 1842

Golden text: "And be not drunken with wine, wherein is riot, but be filled with the Spirit." Ephesians 5:18.

Lesson: Ephesians 4:17-32. Devotional reading: Colossians 3:12-17.

Explanations and Comments

The Old Man: The Unbelieving Gentile, 4:17-18. In these verses Paul warns his readers against the life of non-Christianity. His opening words, "I say therefore and testify in the Lord," remind one of Christ's words, "Verily I say unto you," having the same authority as the latter.

The new man: The Believing Gentile, 4:19-22. The new man is to follow the new man's life, which is to be one of holiness and living. And the new man is to be one of holiness and living. And the new man is to be one of holiness and living.

The new man: The Believing Gentile, 4:19-22. The new man is to follow the new man's life, which is to be one of holiness and living. And the new man is to be one of holiness and living. And the new man is to be one of holiness and living.

Canada's Highways

Surface Highway Mileage in Canada

Amounts To 94,713 Miles

Canada's vast network of highways is a striking illustration of changes brought about by progress and civilization. In the early days of settlement roads were usually to maintain contact with the fur trade and to provide a means of transportation. They were used during the summer months when pack trails were necessary to avoid obstacles to river and lake travel, and during the winter when the prevailing conditions of the ground and the lack of roads made travel by foot or sled necessary. The growth of population and the demand for means of communication between settlements soon made necessary the introduction of overland routes, and road construction in Canada got under way in the pioneer stages of the development of the country.

At the end of 1932 the surfaced highway mileage in Canada amounted to 94,713 miles and unsurfaced roads 214,405 miles, making a total of 309,118 miles. The automobile has played a most important part in the Dominion's road history, especially during the last 20 years in which the motor car has come to rank as a necessity of life of a large percentage of the people. To-day there is in Canada the motor vehicle for almost every town and city, and for every 25 persons there is a mile of road.

Through the decade of the 20's and the early 30's the automobile has been an incentive to governing bodies to improve trunk roads and roads and to build new roads, with the result that in 1933 more than three million national automobile miles made use of Canada's highways.

Unfortunate Irish Governor Acquiesces To Ship In Ireland

A cable message recently reported that the Irish Minister of Education was struggling with the heavy task of 700 miles out in the North Atlantic, water being low, and the pumps were being worked overtime to get the ship out, or faster, than it came in. It also added that in response to 808 signals from the ship, the Minister of Education.

The question may be asked: Why not let the ship be towed by the tug, or not taking the disabled vessel to port? Or if they were standing by the ship, why not let it be towed by the tug, or not taking the disabled vessel to port?

It is a question which has been asked many times, and the answer is that the ship is too big to be towed by the tug, and the answer is that the ship is too big to be towed by the tug.

Long Political Career

Jean Louis Barthelemy Was Twelve Years

Member of French

Jean Louis Barthelemy, France's former minister and later her premier, was born of the leading literary family of French politics since 1889.

At the time of his death the collecting senior statesman was told of his president Albert Lebrun's choice for the next premier should the government of Gaston Doumergue fall.

During his long political career

Barthelemy held nearly every important office of the French government, except that of president. And at 75,

the age when most statesmen are expected to back home in their achievements, Barthelemy sought only further service to his country.

The son of a hardware store owner of the tiny village of Clermont-

Saint-Marie, Barthelemy was a self-made man.

He was one of the most brilliant of the nation's leading historians and literary critics.

All young men the dynamic leader was no stranger to the political life of his country. He was the author of a book on the Dreyfus case, and a hard worker to his ambitious young son to Paris for his education. He was a student at
